1. During September and October 1954, an unidentified East Berlin plumbing firm installed plumbing and cooling equipment in a new radio transmitting installation under the control of the KVP directorate of Berlin. The cooling system utilizes one-half inch pipes to carry cooling water to the transmitter tubes; pressure is maintained by centrifugal pumps.<sup>1</sup>
2. The transmitter is located on a hill at Muehlberg/Mueggelsee. The installation is surrounded by a high fence which is guarded by the KVP on a 24-hour schedule.<sup>2</sup>
